Hook was unable to loosen his hand, and pulled a penknife from his pocket and jabbed the animal in the nose with the blade. This only had the effect of further arousing the donkey, which began kicking and trampling upon Hook. Finally securing his release, Hook, with a badly lacerated hand, started for the City Dispensary, where the hand was dressed and bandaged by Dr. Wiggins.

characterized Mr. Hearst's strange indifference to the success of the gathering. For weeks and weeks the national president of the league has been sending broadcast over the country personal and circular letters, urging, even beseeching, everybody to "work, work, work," and now the recipients of these same letters are wondering why the writer does not follow.

TRYING TO BE CHEERFUL. Secretary Max Ihmsen, who also enjoys the distinction of seeing his name in the New York Journal about every day in inch type, in addition to being Mr. Hearst's personal and official representative at the present "blow-out," was making a desperate effort to be cheerful last night. "We are within twenty minutes of President Hearst by telegraph," he said with a

Mr. Hearst was erroneously announced as arriving in the city yesterday. He will not, as a matter of fact, get here until this afternoon, and in all probability the open-ing of the convention, which has been scheduled to occur at 2 o'clock, will have to be postponed until the man "who pulls

A significant colloquy took place last night between W. P. Anderson, assistant city editor of the New York Journal, and Secretary Ihmsen. "Are we going to have a big crowd?" Mr. Anderson inquired of Mr. Ihmsen. "I don't know," responded Ihmsen; "what do you think about it?" Only a few hours ago, comparatively, Mr Ihmsen was talking loudly of the immense dianapolis to-day and to-morrow. He and Lewis G. Stevenson, the vice presidential candidate's son, estimated the crowd at about 50,000. Later the figure was reduced to 20,000. Now the "I-don't-know" stage has been reached. Some of the local visi-tors to the Grand Hotel have been unkind ers are getting out their top coats in antici-pation of a heavy frost this morning and

CAN COUNT THEM EASILY. The notables in the city prior to 8 o'clock last night could almost be counted upon the fingers of both hands. Probably the biggest of them was Governor Benton Mc-Millin, of Tennessee, who arrived yesterday morning. Others were Representative John Wesley Gaines, of Tennessee; Representative James L. Slayden, of San Antonio Tex., who is a member of the executive committee of the National Association of Clubs; Nicholas M. Bell, of St. Louis, the latter stopping at the Bates House; James Oliver, who represents Senator "Tim" Sullivan's association, "The Bowery Club," and Judge George W. Lambert, of New-

SECRETARY'S STATEMENT. Secretary Ihmsen was asked for a formal statement as to the size of the crowd he expects at the convention to-day and tomorrow. "I really can't say how many will be here," he answered, "but I should think a great many would come, especially in view of the fact that we are to have four of the greatest Democratic orators in the country-William Jennings Bryan, W. Bourke Cockran, Adlai E. Stevenson and Mayor Jones, of Toledo. However, the announcement that Mr. Bryan wil tour the gas belt will undoubtedly affect the attendance here. People will say, 'O' well, if he is coming to our town, we will wait at home to see him.' I am greatly disappointed at the astonishing lack of decorations about your city," continued Mr. Ihmsen. "I had expected that the business men would adopt a different attitudi and look upon the affair as one helpful to everybody, regardless of politics."

The Chicago delegation, with which wi come National Chairman James K. Jones. W. R. Hearst and Willis J. Abbott, of the press bureau, will get here early this aft ernoon. It is expected that the party will number over 300, exclusive of a band of The executive committee of the Nationa

There was still a strange lack of information about the time of the arrival of Mr. Bryan last night. Some of the men at the Grand Hotel said they expected him to get here this evening, while others contented themselves with the statement that since he is on the programme for a speech at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon he will not be here until that time. Mr. Stevenson will get here early this morning.

A SENSATION PROMISED.

Marcus Daly to Be Elected Treasurer to Succeed W. A. Clark.

A sensation of no mean proportions is promised when the convention of Democratic Clubs reaches the order of business calling for the election of officers. Senator W. A. Clark, of Montana, is the present treasurer and also a member of the executive committee. It is settled that Senator Clark is to be retired from his office as treasurer and his bitter political rival, Marcus Daly, substituted. When asked as to the probable result of this action on the part of the convention, Secretary Ihmsen said last night that he supposed that it meant the retirement of Senator Clark from his position on the executive committee as well. He would not, however, say that Senator Clark would sever his connection with the association en-

THE WASHINGTON DELEGATION.

Unique Characters Who Belong to the Jackson Association.

The Jackson Democratic Association of Washington is the oldest political association of that name in the United States. It was organized during the presidency of "Old Hickory," and he himself was an honorary member and often attended its sessions. A few faithful old mossbacks kept feeble life in it during the long period of unbroken Republican ascendency from 1861 to 1885. A delegation of this ancient association is in attendance upon the national convention of Democratic Clubs. It is headed by William T. Whelan (pronounced Whale-an, accent on the Whale), retired merchant. Mr. Whelan, like Samuel Rogers, the London banker, and E C. Stedman, the American broker, always found recreation from business cares in the cultivation of the poetic muse. Among his writings are several campaign songs of superior merit, the best known of them being "The Jeffersonian Banner." Mr. Whelan not only writes songs, but sets them to music himself and then sings them. He is moreover a public speaker of high order, possessing wit and humor and eloquence as a birthright, being of Irish extraction. As a companion he is delightful. In a word, he is the admirable Crichton of the District Democracy. Charles W. Pettit and James T. Boiseau are the veterans of the delegation. They are octogenarians, and witnessed the second inauguration of Jackson in 1833. Pettit is a retired merchant and Boiseau is still actively engaged in business as an iron founder. Mr. Boiseau was an intimate friend of Franklin Pierce when the latter was President. John A. Clarke, J. McDowell Carrington and Robert E. Lee, jr., are lawyers. Mr. Carrington is the senior of the three, and has long been one of the leaders of the Washington bar. Mr. Clarke was a delegate to the Kansas City convention. Mr.

Lee is a grandson of the late Confederate General Robert E. Lee. Dr. Henry Darling and Dr. Charles Allen are practicing physicians. Dr. Allen is also a public speaker of great ability and is in constant demand during important campaigns in Virginia and Maryland. The rest of the delegation are active business men. Frank J. McQuade was a delegate to the Kansas City convention, as was Mr. Whelan, who also presided over about fifteen years. His family in England the District convention that nominated the Kansas City delegates. William J. Donovan, who finds relaxation from business in baseball, of which game he is an expert, either as player or critic, is another who was a delegate to Kansas City. John Maher has been a delegate to every Democratic District convention for thirty years. Of the delegation to Indianapolis who sat with him in the recent District convention are Dennis P. Callahan, who is employed in he office of the architect of the Capitol, Frank L. Hanvey, builder and contractor, and John B. Whittaker. The other delegates are Jonathan P. Crowley, treasurer of the Washington Steamboat Company; John G. Campbell, ainter; Samuel De Nedry, printer; Charles W. Handy, real estate agent; James E. Hoadley, James A. Cahill, real estate agent, and D. Webster Hancock.

States Made at the Afternoon Session.

The International Association of Factory Inspectors, which will hold a four days' meeting in this city, held its first session in the House of Representatives at the Statehouse yesterday morning. There are about fifty delegates in attendance, most of whom are from the Eastern States. Governor Mount welcomed the visitors to the State and Joseph E. Bell, representing Mayor Taggart, turned over to them the keys of the city. In extending his welcome to the visitors Governor Mount said: "It is well that the people realize that labor is the most important factor in the Nation's welfare. We have more politics to the square inch in Indiana than in any other State, but when the elections are over we all return to our work without any bitterness. We are proud of our schools and proud of our literary men, and we are proud of the factory inspection laws we have passed, which look to better conditions for all that labor."

Most of the arrangements for the meeting at Tomlinson Hall on Friday night of this week have been completed by the county Republican committee, and it is believed that this will be one of the biggest demonstrations of the campaign. "After Bryan's speech on the occasion of his being notified of his nomination," said Mr. Wingate. " think there was a disposition on the part of a good many gold Democrats to look upon the Nebraska candidate with more favor. In his speech in this city he discussed the Philippine question at great length and said nothing about the country's finances. A good many people who had op-posed him in 1896 because of his free silver views concluded that he had probably receded a little from his former position on the money question and decided that he | concise and forcible manner, and brought was not such a bad fellow after all. But his argument to a close with an appeal to in his letter of acceptance he showed himself to be the same old Bryan with the same old contentions on the money question, and that turned the tide against It is plainly noticeable in the East, and particularly in New York among the gold Democrats. I don't think Indiana people need to be uneasy about New York. I think that State will be loyal to the administration. Mr. Wingate ventures the assertion that in the event of Bryan's election every note that is executed the day after his election will contain a gold clause. He thinks the people will not believe the theory that the President cannot change the money system of the country without congressional legis-

"How is the election going? It is a curicus fact that all the Europeans that sided with Spain two years ago are now sympathizing with Bryan and hoping for his election. Our bitterest national enemies and our keenest commercial rivals want nothing better than Democratic success. The Germans I know would be nothing averse to taking the Philippines off Mr. Bryan's hands, and possibly that fact has some nfluence on German sympathies; for they think that Mr. Bryan's election would mean complete withdrawal of the United States from all those islands. For my part, at this distance, Mr. Bryan's position is not very clear. I have seen only two of his speeches. They seem to me to be rather diverting, slight-of-hand performances, but hardly good enough to draw attention away from the cabbage under his coat. TENTH WARD REPUBLICANS.

An Overstreet Club Organized at an Enthusiastic Meeting.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Tenth ward Republicans was held at 312 Virginia avenue last night, and the Overstreet Tenth Ward Republican Club was organized, with 135 members. John McGregor was the choice of the members for president, and William E. White was selected as secretary. William Keymeyer was elected treasurer. A vice president from each precinct was elected, as follows: First precinct, Jerry Griffin; second, L. H. Mc-Ness; third, Mr. Pyle; fourth, William Bales; fifth, James Mack; sixth, Isaac Allard; seventh, David Winkler; eighth, William C. Lamb; ninth, Mr. Stewart; tenth, Charles Maguire. The principal speakers were John F. McCray and Lynn Hay, who discussed the issues of the campaign. Both men made forcible arguments, and were greeted with enthusiastic applause. McCray said Bryan's attitude in securing Democratic senators to vote for the peace treaty with Spain was to stop the agitation over the war, for he realized that he would not have a ghost of a chance this year if he did not succeed in stopping the agitation. In speaking of the issue of militarism, on which the Democrats spoke so much, Mr. McCray said the Democratic leaders wanted the people to believe that a standing army of 100,000 would throw this country into an empire, as one soldier would subdue thousands of people and would cover sixty-five square miles in do-ing so. He said the Democrats were afraid of a blue coat, but the Republicans were not afraid of it. Mr. Hay discussed the money question and imperialism. He also referred to the question of trusts, and showed that the Democratic arguments are not based upon facts. There were several other speakers, among them being John Ruckelshaus, Eugene Saulcy, William C. Lamb, Joseph Morgan, John McGaughey and Joseph Minturn. OVERSTREET COLORED CLUB.

The organization, which is little more than four weeks old, numbers more than one hundred, and at every meeting of the club the secretary is kept busy enlisting new recruits. Twenty new members, many of whom will cast their first ballot this fall, were enrolled last night. The meeting was addressed by James H. Lott. He presented the issues of the campaign in a party that had ever represented equal rights to all men. He spoke of the disfranchisement of the negroes in the South, and challenged his hearers to point out a single Republican State in which the negro had ever been deprived of one iota of his rights as guaranteed to him by the Constitution. There were many paramount issues in the campaign, he said, which had been foisted upon the people by Bryan, but it behooved the negro to think only of the issue which was of vital importance to himself. "Nothing," said Mr. Lott, "is so nearly akin to life as liberty, and the

-The Details.

Happiness was not greatly in evidence last night among those who constituted the advance guard of the national convention of Democratic Clubs. The fact is, Max F. Ihmsen, national secretary of the league, his private secretary, L. Curtis, Myron D. King, who has charge of the local arrangements, and pretty much everybody else in and about headquarters

One of the main reasons for their sadness of spirit was the absence of the great leader. By this is not meant William Jennings Bryan, as might be supposed. Mr. Bryan has little to do with the convention to-day and to-morrow except to pose as one of its chief attractions. The head of the convention and of the National League of Democratic Clubs is William R. day's arrivals are expected delegates from Clevelar 4, O. enough to hint that the Democratic lead-L. Curtis, private secretary to Mr. Ihmsen, expresses great confidence in every-thing Democratic. He declares, without batting an eye or cracking a smile, that Bryan has a cinch on the election. "I tell you we are in the best possible position to know the situation," he said last night. "We have a club in every little village and hamlet in the United States, and in an

John C. Wingate Says Republicans John C. Wingate has just returned from trip to New York, and while there he made some inquiry about the real feeling of Republicans and Democrats as to the political situation in that State. "I found," said Mr. Wingate, "that when you talk to a New York Republican and ask him how much truth there is in the assertion of the Democrats that New York is for Bryan he looks at you as if you were a silly fellow and actually laughs in your face. The Republicans in New York are not feeling in the least bit doubtful about that State. The fact is, Mr. Croker is the only New York Democrat who is making any positive assertions about New York State. Republicans in New York feel that Croker's offers to bet big money on Bryan are simply bluffs, and are made to keep the Democracy in line and to scare the Republicans It is the belief that Croker knows his business and will hedge sufficiently before the election to win his bets whichever way things go. I heard of one Republican in New York who wanted to bet $100 000

"One that contains the whole thing in a nutshell is that we are too busy with our dally duties to go 'gunning' for any misgulded railroad men who would vote to return to the times prior to 1896. If you had been in the railroad service at that time you would remember very well that men were begging the few who had regular work to 'lay off' and give them (the extra men) a chance to earn enough to pay house rent and board
